Project Management Days 2010

In Espoo, Finland 9-10 November 2010

BACKGROUND

WHAT IS PROJECT MANAGEMENT DAYS?

Project Management Days is an annual conference organised by Project Management Association and corporations in the projects field. During the past few years, this event has become the biggest conference for project business and management. The conference has now been held annually for over a decade, yet towards the end of the 20th century it rather quickly established its significance. The event is currently regarded as one of the most considerable meeting venues for project professionals, corporations and the public sector in the projects field, regardless of the line of business. During the conference, the latest information on projects and best practices of various fields is exchanged.

WHY IS PROJECT MANAGEMENT DAYS HELD?

The utilisation of projects is a constantly renewable method of operation, regardless of the line of business. Projects have gained an increasingly more substantial role in all fields irrespective of tasks and duties. For many corporations, project business is one of the most important tools for maintaining and improving national and international competitiveness. The world of projects and its challenges are expanding. Project Management Days strives to meet these challenges year after year by organising a two-day conference presenting the latest solutions, models, methods and tools in order to facilitate the projects professionals in their daily work.

PROJECT MANAGEMENT ASSOCIATION

Project Management Association is the Finnish unit of IPMA (International Project Management Association). Project Management Association currently comprises over 2700 individual members and over 150 corporate and organisation members. It provides projects-related national and international information in various ways. The members and partners create an extensive and versatile network that observes the development in the projects field nationally and internationally. The strength and advantages of the network are best realised during the annual Project Management Days.
